(11:00 a.m. Sunday services televised Mondays at 6:00 p.m., cable channel 17)

When we think of world-class cities, places like New York, Hong Kong, or London spring to mind. Rarely do we get down the list to Astana, Kazakhstan.

Astana is a new city. Barely twelve years old, it was a little bigger than Eufaula when chosen to be Kazakhstan's new capital. Now it boasts almost a million residents.

It did not happen overnight or without a plan.

Inside one of Astana's gleaming towers is the master plan—a scale model of the city's future. You can trace the flow of the river—that won't change—and you can see where the next phase of the city will grow, complete with miniature skyscrapers, monuments, apartments, a university, and a domed indoor park to escape the winter snow.

Everything that will be is laid out in miniature on the plan.

God has a scale model of our future as well—and that model's name is Jesus. His plan is that we would each accept salvation and then be transformed in every detail to reflect the character of Jesus in all his truth, justice and grace.

Who knows whether Astana will ever become a true world-class city? But God has a plan to make us world-class—or, better, heaven-class citizens of his kingdom!

With joy,

Scott
